Increase of populist policies in Europe

Presented by the CDI

In view of the elections at the European Parliament to be held between 22 and 25 May 2014 where they are called on to express the election of a new European Parliament by means of a democratic vote as well as, for the first time, the election of the President of the European Commission pursuant to the Treaty of Lisbon, the CDI:

- Expresses its concern at the increased trends in political thinking, demonstrated by national Political Parties and those at European level, which are contrary to the European process of building and the pillars supporting it according to the Treaty of Rome,
- Declares that the longest period of stability, progress and peace on the Continent must be maintained in the face of the pleas for its dissolution,
- Asks the political parties at European level to follow the new roadmap for electing the President of the Commission very carefully, bearing in mind the election result on the Continent,
- Insists that there is no room for the anti-European extremisms and populist policies in the democratic society of Europe, which we are building. This process has led to an unimagined period of prosperity and development in these difficult economic times, where proposals based on the principles and values of the CDI are bearing fruit in order to emerge from the major economic crisis experienced at global level.
