

Resolution on Separatism

The surge of separatist movements from Europe to Asia observed on the global stage, has drawn significant attention, signaling years characterized by political turbulence and simmering tensions. The looming specter of violence casts a shadow over the potential outcomes of these movements, prompting the world to brace itself for their uncertain trajectories and the possible consequences they may entail.

In recent times, Africa has experienced a troubling surge in separatist movements and terrorist activities, posing a grave threat to the continent's peace, stability, and development. Recognizing its role as an international organization of democratic political parties committed to upholding the values of peace, stability, and humanity,

The CDI-IDC hereby resolves:

-To strongly condemn separatism as a severe threat to national sovereignty and democratic principles. Expressing concerns about external interference in nations' internal affairs, the organization acknowledges separatism as a catalyst for violence and instability, affecting various societal aspects including politics, economics, social dynamics, and legal frameworks.

-To acknowledge the development of separatist movements and terrorist groups as a significant danger undermining the stability of countries and hindering peace and regional integration in Africa. To condemn countries and organizations providing shelter, support, financing, and armament to separatist movements and associated terrorist groups, recognizing that such actions exacerbate tensions and pose a threat to regional stability and international peace and security.

-To call upon the international community to unify efforts across the African continent, at national, subregional, and regional levels, to combat the threats posed by separatism and terrorism. Collective action is essential to effectively address these challenges and promote peace and stability. To urge the international community to mobilize promptly and intensively to prevent and combat separatist and terrorist activities, emphasizing the necessity of swift action to neutralize these groups and safeguard regional and international peace and security.

- To emphasize the importance of inclusive governance, dialogue, and accountability in addressing grievances and fostering peace in Africa. Sustainable solutions require the active participation of diverse stakeholders to build trust and promote social cohesion.

- To welcome the efforts led by Morocco, under the leadership of King Mohammed VI, to advance multilateral action against separatism and terrorism. Morocco's commitment to peace, solidarity, and regional integration in Africa serves as a commendable example for promoting stability and cooperation. To reaffirm its dedication to defending the principles of peace, stability, and humanity and pledge to work collaboratively with its members and partners to address the challenges posed by separatism and terrorism in Africa and beyond.
